

CONTRIBUTORS

Ralph N. H. Bulmer was appointed Professor of Social Anthropology and Head of the Department of Anthropology and Sociology at the University of Papua and New Guinea in January 1968. He has recently been elected President of KIVUNG, the Linguistic Society of the University of Papua and New Guinea. Dr. Bulmer received his Ph.D. from the Australian National University. Before coming to Port Moresby he was lecturer in Social Anthropology at the University of Oakland, New Zealand (1958-67) and Joint Editor of the Journal of the Polynesian Society, (1966-67). Dr. Bulmer has published articles in various anthropological journals, and is currently working with Dr. A.K. Pawley and Professor B.G. Biggs on a dictionary of the Karam language.

Anne Cochran received her B.A. from the University of Auckland, New Zealand and has been a member of SIL in New Guinea since 1966. In 1967 she was graciously invited by Dr. S. Hatanaka of the University of Tokyo to spend several weeks with her in the isolated valley of the Ok Om River. During this time she carried out the preliminary study of the Yoliapi language presented here.

Sarah Gudschinsky is Literacy Coordinator of the Summer Institute of Linguistics. She received her B.A. in Education from Central Michigan University and went on to complete her M.A. and Ph. D. both in linguistics at the University of Pennsylvania. As well as her early experience in teaching she has had more than 15 years of field experience with SIL in Mexico and Brazil. She has also conducted literacy workshops and seminars in Peru, Vietnam, Nigeria, India, New Guinea, and Australia, and has served as a linguistic consultant to SIL members in Bolivia, Guyana, and India. In addition she has taught many summers at the University of Oklahoma and has been visiting lecturer at the University of Brasilia, at University College, London, and at Annamalai University in India. Her major publications include Handbook of Literacy and How to Learn an Unwritten Language, as well as numerous shorter papers.

Ellis W. Deibler, Jr. received his M.A. in Linguistics from the University of Michigan. He is now working on his Ph.D. dissertation on Gahuku Grammatical Structure. A member of the SIL since 1957, he has been working in the Gahuku language area around Goroka in the Eastern Highlands of New Guinea since 1959. His "Grammatical Structure of Gahuku" was published as Working Papers No. 2, SIL, Ukarumpa, 1963. Mr. Deibler has already completed a translation of half the New Testament into Gahuku (to be published in two volumes: one by the Bible Society, one by SIL).

Rudolph Zimek is Visiting Professor of Russian with the Department of Modern Languages of Monash University in Melbourne. Dr. Zimek has come to Australia from Charles University in Prague, and has recently been invited as Visiting Professor for the coming academic year by the Australian National University. Dr. Zimek has done extensive research on Russian syntax; his publications include articles on the copula in Russian and on Syntactic Transformations in Russian. He also gave a paper on The Semantic Aspect in Transformational Grammar at the 10th International Congress of Linguistics in Bucharest.

Geoffrey E. Smith is Lecturer in the Department of Education of the University of Papua and New Guinea. Mr. Smith who has an M.A. from Cambridge University was Head of the English and History Departments of the Alliance School in Tanzania from 1963 to 1968.